during the civil war the us government abolished slavery without reimbursing enslavers diminishing the white south's wealth by nearly 50 percent after the confederacy's defeat white southerners demanded federal compensation for the financial value of formerly enslaved people and fought for other policies that would recognize abolition's costs during reconstruction as amanda laury kleintop shows their persistence eventually led to the creation of section 4 of the fourteenth amendment which abolished the right to profit from property in people surprisingly former confederates responded by using lost cause history making to obscure the fact that they had demanded financial redress in the first place the largely successful efforts of white southerners to erase this history continues to generate false understandings today kleintop draws from an impressive array of archival sources to uncover this lost history in doing so she demonstrates how this legal battle also undermined efforts by formerly enslaved people to receive reparations for themselves and their descendants a debate that persists in today's national dialogue in the recent cultural heritage boom community based and national identity projects are intertwined with interest in cultural tourism and sites of the memory of enslavement questions of historical guilt and present responsibility have become a source of social conflict particularly in multicultural societies with an enslaving past this became apparent in the context of the black lives matter movement in 2020 when statues of enslavers and colonizers were toppled controversial debates about streets and places named after them re-ignited and the european union apologized for slavery after the racist murder of george floyd related debates focus on museums on artworks acquired unjustly in societies under colonial rule the question of whether and how museums should narrate the hidden past of enslavement and colonialism including their own colonial origins with respect to narratives about presumed european supremacy and the need to establish new monuments for the enslaved their resistance and abolitionists of african descent in this volume we address this dissonant cultural heritage in europe with a strong focus on the tangible remains of enslavement in the atlantic space in the continent this may concern for instance the residences of royal noble and bourgeois enslavers charitable and cultural institutions universities banks and insurance companies financed by the traders and owners of enslaved africans merchants who dealt in sugar coffee and cotton and the owners of factories who profited from exports to the african and caribbean markets related to atlantic slavery
